Abstract:

In 2017 I reviewed education for the years of schooling in regional, rural and remote Australia for the Australian Government. I travelled our country meeting with students, teachers, parents, employers, farmers, Indigenous leaders, government officials and others to hear what needs to change to improve achievements and opportunities. The review also received 340 written submissions and through an analysis of these and 'the voices' I wrote a report recommending specific actions to create change. But there is much more that needs to be done to bridge the gap between the achievements and opportunities of rural and urban students. And at the core of the 'much more' is a radical re-calibrating of key relationships between people, places, policies, processes, products, priorities.... and more.

Dr John Halsey is former Professor of Rural Education and Communities at Flinders University.
